Breast cancer genetic testing: moving from cancer risk assessment to therapeutic biomarker

Synopsis

Breast cancer germline genetic testing has evolved from being a single-gene to multigene cancer panel risk assessment tool, and also a therapeutic biomarker for cancer treatment. The challenges and opportunities derived from new clinical scenarios that accompany these advances will be addressed during this educational session.